THE LANTERN LANE READER□S COMPANION

Spoiler-light notes, prompts & keepsake pages

KATHRINE ROWAN

A NOTE FOR THE READER

Some stories invite us to notice how much can change without anyone raising their voice. These pages are a companion for reading slowly, noticing generously, and making a little room for what stays with you.

You can use these pages while reading or after finishing the novel. There are no quizzes, right answers, or plot spoilers.

Before You Begin

What is drawing you to a story about quiet magic and beginning again?

What does “belonging” look or feel like to you?

THE PLACE

A Walk Through Lantern Lane

Take note of a setting that feels particularly alive: a garden, a window, a streetlamp, a café, a room that seems to hold more than it shows.

If you could linger anywhere in the story for one extra hour, where would you choose?

THE PEOPLE

A Small Circle of Care

The novel turns on the small, ordinary ways people notice and care for one another. As you read, note an exchange that feels quietly significant.

Which character made you feel most at home, and why?

THE DETAILS

The Things That Stay

A line I want to remember:

A sensory detail that made the world feel real:

An unexpected moment of humour:

THE SEASONS

Change Without Announcement

Nora is learning how to live outside the rhythms that once defined her days. Think about a change that arrived quietly in your own life.

What might “beginning again” mean without starting from nothing?

AFTER THE LAST PAGE

What the House Kept

What stayed with you after closing the book?

What question would you most like the next book in the trilogy to explore?

The House the Cats Chose continues beyond Book One. No release dates are announced here.
